Tomb E 422. Ptolemaic period

The complete outfit of a mummy. Consisting of 5 pieces of cartonnage, a headpiece, a pectoral, a stomach piece, a leg piece and a foot case, all of which were placed outside the wrappings of the mummy, and fastened on either by sewing or with narrow ribbons of mummy cloth. The head piece shows a winged scarab and the sun's disc.

Objects from a tomb of XXVth dyn. At Atfieh.

Amulets; scarab; large heart scarab (found at the breast of the body), rare, an unusually fine specimen; inlaid eyes from the successive stucco coffins within which the body was enclosed. 8 ushabtis accompanied this burial.

Tomb group: XIIthe dynasty

7 small vases; kohl pot broken to release the Ka of the face

Tomb S. 29.

S. 29 is the most remarkable group. It was found with the body of the woman buried in a simple trench grave. Under the head lay masses of beads, cowries, uncut carnelians, blue glaze amulets, and scarabs. On the wrists and fingers, one bears the cartouche of Sheshonk of the XXIInd dynasty. This king is the Shishak of the scripture who is said to have defeated Reheboam. All the beads and scarabs have been restrung in the original order in which they were found. Large vase, white clay, fault in modelling.

Small vase, Ptolemaic, broken to release Ka.

Pottery ring VIth dynasty, with vase (same dyn.)

Predynastic white, wavy line unguent vase.

Bowl, last XXIInd to XXVIth dyn.

XVIII dyn, large red ware vase

Ptolemaic period

Tomb E 422

The mummy of a small child found in the south cemetery in tomb E 422. the tomb, which dates from the Ptolemaic period, consisted of a rectangular brick structure built just below the surface of the ground; it had been preserved with its contents untouched, owing to the fact that another tomb had been built directly over it at a slightly later date.
